Using Continuous Quality Improvement to Evaluate and Improve Your Concussion Management Plan

1. Course Description

Continuous quality improvement (QI) is a core competency for all healthcare providers. While it is a relatively new concept in athletic training education and practice, the use of QI is critical to ensure best practices are followed with respect to policy implementation. Best practices in the area of concussion are rapidly evolving with the newest international guidelines emphasizing early treatment interventions and a process for returning a patient to school. This presentation will provide an overview of QI principles and processes and then focus on using the QI framework to evaluate a concussion management plan. The presentation will include several examples of tools (eg. Quality Assurance Checklists) that attendees can use to evaluate their current practice and continuously monitor implemented changes in the future.
